

2

A learning disability is a lifelong condition that affects the way a person learns new things and information.

What is a learning disability?

- 3
- What are the signs of a learning disability?
- Takes longer to learn new skills
 - Struggles to concentrate, easily distracted or difficulty focusing between tasks
 - Difficult to regulate own emotions
 - Challenges with memory

8

EMPOWER DISABILITIES

Learning Disability Guide

4

Can someone with a learning disability be independent?

The answer is yes with the right support they can achieve anything.

“Don’t be afraid to sparkle, shine bright and the world will smile back”

5

With the right support in place someone with a learning disability can get a job, have a place called home and much more.

How much support does someone with a learning disability need?

6

It can vary, some will need a lot of care and support.
Others will only need some support in their lives.